something like "Serif" You can change it back to "Lucida Grande" or "Verdana" from the Settings-->Advanced. If you're not using XP SP3, or not using IE7+, you can change it in the registry. Open regedit and navigate to HKEY_CURRENT_USER\Control Panel\Fonts Right click on Fonts. Expand Fonts. Find the "Lucida Grande" or "Verdana" subkey, and then change it to whatever font you prefer. The only place I can't change the fonts in Windows XP is the change center. Go to Control Panel --Appearance and click the Customize button. Now, click the Fonts tab. There's a "Size of menu text" entry under "Fonts". Change it to your preference. Even though you can change the font of your desktop, if you change the font of the control center, all the buttons, text, and more will change with it. If you want to change them all, I will refer you to the answer I gave to another guy who had a similar question. If you're not using XP SP3, or not using IE7+, you can change it in the registry. I hope this helped. A: Windows XP, in Control Panel > Appearance, you'll find a setting called "Text size", which will change the sizes of most UI elements in your operating system.
